Sadat views linkage 'matter of principle'

OAIRO, Dec. 30 (Agencies)
— President Anwar Sadat said Saturday Egypt's demand for a tink between a peace treaty with Israel and a Palestinian settlement is "a matter of principle" without which there can be no agreement.

He termed the issue a major hurdle blocking the conchusion of a treaty, but he appeared confident it can be overcome.

"The differences (with Israel) are nonsense except for linkage which is a matter of principle, and we will not sign a treaty without it," Sadat told some 72 visiting Egyptian scho-lans studying abroad.

Israel has rejected the American-backed Egyptian proposai that Palestinian self-rule elections in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza be held by the end of 1979.

Tel Aviv has said it is ready for further negotiations on the autonomy plan hut without tying it to any target date.

Other differences delaying conclusion of a peace treaty center on whether it should supersede Egypt's Arah defense commitments and on when security arrangements in Sinai can be reviewed. Treaty negotiations have been at a standstill since mid-November.

"The cardinal disagreement behind the present pause in negotiations with Israel is the tink between a peace treaty and a timetable for resolving the Palestinian problem," Sa-

Sadat termed Israel's insistence on treaty precedence over Egypt's obligations under a 1951 Arab joint defense pact as "something that has no legs to stand on and a form of Despite the differences, he

Khaddam says Egypt, Israel will eventually sign treaty

BEIRUT. Dec. 30 (R) -Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam was quoted as saying he believes Egypt will eventually sign a peace treaty with Israel, and that a tripar-tite alliance between the two countries and the United States is already in effect.

(Egyptian President Anwar) Sadat will sign," Khaddam told the Paris-based Arabic weekly "Al-Mustaqbal."

'We can say that a new tripartite alliance has come into being in the area.

Egypt is in this alliance with America and Israel, and Egypt's role in the pact is to weaken the Arab nation.'

Khaddam said the stalling of the Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations was only an attempt to neutralize the resolutions of the Arab summit held in Baghdad lest month to counter the Camp David Egyptian-Israeli agreements.

Soviet-Syrian relations, following reported Soviet reservations on arms sales to Syria, Khaddam said there had been discussions between the two countries similar to those held between any two states linked

Boum edienne's funeral triggers row with Rabat

ALGIERS, Dec. 30 (Agencies)-A row flared between Algeria and Morocco hours after Algerian President Houari Boumedicane's state funeral because of an alleged Aigerian refusal to admit a Moroccan delegation. The two countries have been at loggerheads since Spain ceded the former Spanish Sahara to Morocco and Mauritania three years ago.

President Zia arrived late Friday night and proceeded to Medina where he prayed at the Prophet's Mosque.

He was seen off at the airpont by Prince Fawaz, governor of Mecca, Gen. Mansoor-Al-Shuaibi, commander of the western region and several other officials.

Friday night Morocco, which has no diplomatic relations with Algeria because of the Sahara dispute, said the Algerian government had refused to allow a Moroccan delegation ted by Prime Minister Ahmad Osman to attend Boumedienne's funeral.

One foreign delegate who attended Boumedienne's funeral, however, was Mauritanian Foreign Minister Cheikna Ould Muhammad,

The Polisario guerrillas fighting for the former Spanish Sahara's independence declared a ceasefire on the Mauritanian front last July after Mauritanian President Mokhtar Ould Daddah was overthrown in a coup d'état. Since then, Polisario and the new government in Nouakchott have started peace talks.

Shah reported ready to leave temporarily if order returns petroleum rationing because, he said, operations in refineries

TEHRAN, Dec. 30 (Agencies) — Palace officials indicated Saturday that the Shah might leave the country temporarily if a civilian government can restore order in Iran. They insisted the Shah will never abdicate.

The statements appeared to be part of a campaign by the Shah's supporters to boister the chances of French-educated lawyer Shapour Bakhtiar, 63, in trying to form a civilian government to replace the martial law regime. That effort received an apparent selback Saturday when National Front leader Karim Sanjabi refused to support Bakhtiar. In a statement after their hour-long meeting, Sanjabi said he could not support any government "with the present illegal regime" and that the Front's council had expelled Bakhtiar, who had been the deputy leader.

It began to appear that announcement of Bakhtiar's government, would not come before Sunday at the earliest. Radio Iran said the two houses of parliament would meet in joint session Sunday following discussions Salurday between their speakers and the Shah. Official sources said the speakers bad given the go-ahead for the Shah's plan to install Bakhtiar as premier. There was speculation that parliament would meet Sunday to propose Bakhtiar to the Shah - in line with longneglected constitutional rules under which parliament may tell the Shah whom it wants as premier. Fierce Fighting

While political negotiations were under way, fierce fighting rocked major cities in Iran Saturday night as hig crowds pressed their campaign to oust the Shah. The heaviest fighting was reported in Mashhad, near the

The military governor of the oil province of Khuzestan, Gen. Boghrat Jaffarian, said oil workers detained for any reason would be freed, according to the official radio.

He also said the security of oil installations would be entrusted to the workers, implying that troops sent in when the strikes began last month would be withdrawn. "It is self-evident that those who serve the industry would also protect it," the radio quoted Jaffarian as saying: Religious leader, Ayatollah Mahmoud Taleghani, had asked the authorities to accept two other demands of the strikers. They were a total ban on exports, including sales to Israel and South Africa, and reinstatement of workers evicted from company homes.

No oil has been exported from Iran, the world's second largest exporter after Saudi Arabia, since the beginning of this week. Oil production, normally at over 6,000,000 barrels a day plunged to between 250,000 and 300,000 barrels a day, the radio said Saturday.

JEDDAH, Dec. 30-The secretariat of the Organization of the Islamic Conference was urged Friday to study the legal implications of an Islamic international relief organization similar to the Red Cross.

The Islamic Commission for Economic, Cultural and Social Affairs, which ended a fourday session here last week announced Sunday that is had recommended that Islamic legai experts devise a name and emblem for the proposed organization.

The commission itself proposed as the name the "international Organization of the Green Crescent" and, as emblem, a green crescut on a white field.

It also advised the secretariat to prepare a list of programs to mark the beginning of the 15th century of the Islamic era, which falls at the end of 1979.

Activities for the centenary are to continue over a period of five years, according to one of the recommendations of a conference held in Mecca recently by heads of national committees for the occasion. The commission also asked for lost estimates.

U.S. rejects Taiwan's bid for permanent official ties

TAIPEI, Dec. 30 (AP) — U.S. officials have rejected Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Ching-kuo's proposal for "government-to-govern-ment" relations between Taiwan and America after the United States recognizes Peking, officials said Saturday.

A diplomatic source said the U.S. government will have a hand in creating an "entity" to represent American interests here, "but it will not be a branch of the U.S. government. Government-to-government relations are not in the cards." Chiang, son of the late oacionalist leader Chiang Kai-

An American statement Friday said talks would continue in Taiwan and Washington in the coming weeks. Chiang's statement said both countries agreed that embassy staffs in Taipei and Washingtoo would continue to function through February. Embassy officials said U.S. ambassador Leonard Unger would leave Taiwan shortly after Jan. 10.

In Washington, Taiwan's ambassador to the United States, James Shen, said goodbye to his friends in Congress Friday and went home to Taiwan. He said he was sad, hut not hit-ter, about the U.S. decision to sever relations.

Sen. Barry Goldwater told a press conference at the Taiwan embassy that the hreak io relations was "rotten all the way through."

He charged that formal re-cognition of Peking was "done for the big banks of this world" which saw mainland China as a great customer. Shen had been something of

IRAN CLIMAX

The crisis in Iran is quickly coming to a head. The Shah will either overcome all his problems, which seems unlikely. or a military or opposition government will have to succeed him. Reports of Washington's plans to send a naval force to the Gulf have been the final confirmation that the crisis is near its end.

The Americans do not intend to intervene directly to the Iranian crisis. Their show of force is meant as a warning to the Russians not to interfere. In recent weeks the two countries have been trading charges of intervention in Iranian affairs. Of course, both are to hlame for some of Iran's problems but they are not the cause of the current uprising whose roots are strictly local.

So far the Shah has survived thanks to the army whose discipline has surprised most observers. The danger oow is not that the allegiance of the army will weaken but that the regime will not he able to meet its financial commitments to the military establishment in view of the deteriorating economic conditions in the country. The announcement that oil production has ceased may be exaggerated but oil supplies could not be very high. In addition, the country's financial reserves have been exhausted — they were never high because of the Shah's ambitious plans. So the imminent collapse of the ecocomy may hring the whole system down.

At least a few people in Tehran do not seem to agree that the end is near. They talk of a civilian government beaded by Dr. Bakhtiar. The situation cannot be frozen. The Shah will oeed the oil income to last a few more weeks but even then there is no guarantee that Dr. Bakhtiar will succeed since the powerful religious leaders remain determined to settle for nothing less than toppling the Shah.

The dangers resulting from a change of regime in Iran must be put in proper focus. There have been warnings that the troubles in Iran are bound to spill over and engulf the whole region. This is true only if agitation continues in Iran and weak governments succeed one another. But any strong government will be an improvement on the present situation. If the Shab is fully restored in power-a distinctly faint pos-Sibility—he will have to forget his foreign ambitions which have often given some Arab neighbors cause to worry and concentrate on rebuilding the home front. A military government will also be determined to improve the lot of the Iranians and will refrain from costly adventures that the weakened franizo economy is ill-prepared to finance or sustain. The same applies to at opposition government supported by the religious leaders. Here again, the emphasis will be on domestic problems to the exclusion of everything else.

The Gulf states need not worry except for the case of continued troubles in Iran. They bave lived with Sbah governments for years with only minimal problems and should continue to do so if the Shah overcomes his problems. They should also be able to live with his successors.

Riot scenario

By Robert Reid TEHRAN

It begins with a handful of young men mingling with the street erowd, exchanging glances, peering for signs of the army. Suddenly someone shows "marg bar Shah." Others pick up the chant and another demonstration begins.

Reinforcements stream in from nearby sbops, office buildings and side streets. Some chant slogans against the United States or the Shah, while others simply stand by and shout encouragement.

Soon the crowd has swelled to several hundred, blocking traffic. Demonstrators weave through the stalled cars, plastering windows with anti-Shah slogans and encouraging motorists to blow their borns in support.

Others build fires in the streets, fueling them with cardboard boxes, planks from construction projects or whatever can be found.

Suddenly someone shouts a warning and truckload of soidiers appears. The groops order the demonstrators to disperse, then fire warning shots in the air.

The crowd scatters, ducking into huildings, racing down side streets or through open windows. As if by prearranged signal, the few dozen leaders, who appear to be middle class and between 18 and 25 years old, melt into the growd, only to reappear at another corner to begin the scenario again. This has been the pattern for the majority of demonstrations in Tehran over the last few weeks. The disorders, growing out of a mixture of religious and political discontent with the Shah, have plunged Iran into its deepest erisis since the 1953 coup that returned the Shah to the throne after his ouster by then Prime Minister Muhammad Mossadeq.

Most of the disorders have occurred io the downtown business area, paralyzing commercial activity and choking traffic. Since last weekend shoppers and office workers have had to duck for cover as troops opened fire to break up the demonstrations.

Most of the demonstrators so far have been unarmed, and few have hurled anything more than abuse at the troops. As soon as soldiers make their move, the protesters run.

In most cases, three or four soldiers armed with M-16 rifles with bayonets have been able to disperse crowds of several thousand Troops have occasionally fired directly at demonstrators, such as during a funeral march Wednesday, but most of the volleys have been io the air.

Soldiers also have made little effort to chase down demonstrators, although some ringieaders have been caught. Part of the army's difficulty stems from the protesters' tactic of blending into the street crowds. -- (AP)

CHINESE SURPRISE!

By Adrian Hamilton

LONDON -Within hours of the oil producers announcing a phased 14.5 per cent increase io oil prices for 1979, averaging 10 percent over the year, the dollar went into another slide - a slide only constrained by beavy support by the central banks of the Western nations.

Inevitably, it has been the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) which tethack to world prowth

The U.S. administration in particular was loud in its protestations of the "damage" of the OPEC move and the suffering it will cause.

Other Western countries have been a little more disingentious, pointing to the harm it would cause the poorer nations rather than the damage it would do to themselves. But even Britain, whose North Sea assets give it more reason than most to welcome a rise in oil prices, has modestly declared that the effect of the OPEC decision on world trade gives the country little cause for comfort. But the chorus of disapproval which greeted OPEC'a deliberations in Abu Dbabi owes far more to politics than to economics

The U.S. administration especially was caught with egg on its face, hence the fury of its initial response. It believed that the rise would be lower and nad told its allies in Europe and elsewhere that it had the situation well under control.

In the event, the overall rise was larger than expected in Washington. But it is not that large in real economic terms.

The producers have, quite justifiably, taken advantage of market conditions and the added strains of Iran's problems to reverse the previous ilde of falling real prices. But they have cleverly staged the increase in three consecutive jumps, both to give a continued market incentive for oil companies to purchase in advance of the next increase (thus assuring the increase is maintained through the normal sumon world trade, to which the

The 14.5 per cent increase by October in practice works out at slightly less than 10 per cent over the year as a whole. This is broadly consistent with the expected U.S. inflation rate in 1979 while, for other countries, the dollar fall will go far to compensate for the increase.

producers' fortunes are as closely tied as the consumers.

Some of the poorer nations will suffer, but for most of the developing countries, whose currencies are closely tied to the dollar, the direct impact could be a great deal more moderate than appears on the surface.

The U.S. was beading for renewed dollar problems and a slow-down in growth well before the OPEC decision. The main sources of growth for 1979. Germany and Japan, are likely to be much less affected because of the special strength of their currencies against the dollar

As the OECD pointed out in its December forecast, the impact of the rise on the Western industrial economies might seem big in broad figures, by raising the total import bill by some $19 billion and inflation rates

hy just over half a percent in 1979. In pracoce, however, it was likely to cause little change to the Organization's generally optimistic growth forecasts.

Yet, if oil in itself is less important to the dollar and world adversary - Taiwan. trade than other factors, the OPEC decisioo showed cleary enough that oil cannot be left out of the equation any longer.

That is the real importance of the U.S. reaction. In the end it will be Saudi Arahia and the ture course of oil supplies and

In Abu Dhabi, Saudi Arabia clearly signalled that, while it continued to believe in restraint, it also accepted the argument of other producers that prices should now start to recover the ground lost in the last few years of surpluses.

The U.S. administration's anguish at this attitude is understandable enough. But the U.S. itself has the power to influence events either way. It has already done surprisingly well in curhing the growth of oil imports, but the size of America's pull on foreign oil continues to hang gloomily over the world

Next year will see President Carter face the crucial question of decontrol of domestic oil prices as the current legislation runs out. Whether OPEC's decision will help or hinder him to taking that decision has yet to be seen. But it has at least dented the over-optimism and easy forecasts of energy surpluses and falling prices that have become common currency in America in the past year. (OFNS)

Begin, Dayan not eye to eye

TEL AVIV -Israel's cabinet meets Sunday to decide on the next step in the sluggish Mideast peace process amid indications that Prime Minister Menahem Begin and his top advisors aren't secing eye to eye.

The only easily predictable result of the meeting is that there will be a declaration of Israel's readiness to sign a peace treaty with Egypt, the draft drawn up Nov. 11 when the two countries ended their treaty talks in Washington.

Things have oot remained static in this volatile region. however. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, stressing he is not seeking a separate peace treaty with Israel, has proposed a series of interpretive letters which Israel so far rejects.

A crescendo of anti-Shah rioting has struck Iran - a country which many had thought was a stable link in a chain of Mideast countries friendly to the West. A peace treaty belween Israel and Egypt would stabilize the southern end of the chain, but the situation in Iran has added an unforeseen radical element with an adverse effect on the momentum toward BOLESCO.

President Carter sent Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on a Mideast mediation effort and drew Israel's wrath when Washington backed Cairo's proposed treaty changes.

Egyptian Prime Minister Mustapha Khalil and Israeli

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan met with Vance in Bassels on Christmas Eve. and Dayan returned to Israel recommend that the cabinet endorse a method worked out in telks. That method hasn't been revealed, but reports in the Israeli press say that Dayan is recommending new negotiations on three points, while Begin is on record as saying he is within to talk with Cairo about just two

Begin and Dayan evidently agree to the need for talks on a letter about implementing the plan for Palestinian autonomy and on an interpretive note about reviewing the treaty. They don't like Egypt's terms but are willing to talk on these

According to reports in the press here, Dayan and Begin disagree about Egypt's demand for an interpretive note on Article Six. Its clauses say that: the treaty supersedes other treaties, which would include Egypt's defense arrangements with other Arab countries."

Dayan, the press reports say, believes it is necessary to find an agreed interpretation with Egypt of this article. But Begin said Friday that the article shouldn't be changed,

Dayso said earlier in week that the problem was the American interpretation which said the clause wouldn't take offect until there was a general;

fernolis four that they points wind up facing the Berptine army in the Smai Ponintule in the following accounts: leasing builds on the Syrian front, israci makes a pro-camprive strike into Syria, Damascou igrokes Brussels for restaining peace its mutual delegae treaty with Egypt, and Cairo joins the mar even though it has a peace treaty with luraci.

> Some Israeli commentators say Begin is overly legalistic in rotusing to give Sedat a few words that would show farmed isn't getting special treatment. Meir Merhav writer in the "Jorutalem Post" that Bogin is trying to gain "debeting points" that would be uttilent in a future war, and Merhay worries that "brick by brick, a new wall of district is erected between us and Egypt."

Such arguments don't affect Begin, who on Friday described the article in question as "the essence, the very meening" of the treaty.

- In Sunday's debate Begin can win any argument, but he may not want to molate Dayan, has chief negotiator, and in the near background is Defense Minis ter Ezer Weizman, who is anzious not to fritter away the chance for peace with Egypt.

However the cabinet debate turns out, it is clear that weeks of negotiations are still needed and that 1978 will not have fulfilled its promise as the year that Israel and Egypt would reach a peace agreement.

At one landing men in flowing robes and women in gossamer African saris, their packages, sacks of coal and sugar and small herds of goats are loaded onto creaking ferries which cross over to Tutti Island. Across the street from the ferry point is the huge, glearning Friendship Hall, scene of the pan-African and pan-Arab meetings which reflect President Jaafer Numeiri's growing role in regional politics. Recently the nearby cinema showed "The Wedding of Zein," an internationally prize-winning film spotlighting traditional Muslim village life in northern Sudan, "Zeio" played on the heels of "Saturday Night Fever", and both enthusiustic

In Khartourn, where the Rhie Nile meets the White Nile oo its long, life-giving flow to the sea, one feels the pulse of a country which has deep, elaborate roots in the past, but which is on the brink of significant ecocomic-and thus social -- change. Dr. T., a Dinka tribesman who studied medicine in the U.S. and Germany, speaks for many educated young Sudanese as he sits at an outdoor table of a famous watering hole left over

"With luck and the present gvernment, I think the country will develop quickly now." be says, "But we are still at the stage where professionals stay or come back only out of love or a sense of duty, not for the money or the opportunity. Fortunately, there are more of these dedicated people every day, but I still see more Sudanese doctors in London than I do here." (Sudan has only one doctor for every 15,000 inhabitants.

Laborers too prefer to work abroad, especially in Saudi Arabia and the Gulf where wages are higher. Good jobs: are hard to find in Khartoum. a situation not helped by the influx of young working-age refugees from Ethiopia and

And the gap between the college graduate and the average Sudanese is still great in many ways: a year at the University of Juba, for instance, costs 20 times the per capita income of the country, and 50 times the average income in the region where it is located.

But economic change is imminent, brought on by inter-national faith-pledged in hard cash in the stable government created by Numeiri in the seventies, and by a new look at natural resnurces.

Probably the most dramatic potential comes from oil, which has been found in the swampy south. Hopes are running high among natives of the area, poorer than the rest of Sudan, that black gold will fipance local development projects and change lives here as it has changed those in the oil countries across the Red Sea.

But the question of whether or not the oil is there in commercial quantities remains unanswered. In the past three years, Chevron has spent about $60 million exploring the marshes of the Upper Nile province, but it appears that discoveries are not yet big enough to justify a major oil field development program. Nevertheless, Chevron is back continuiog the search now that the dry season tas begun.

If and when hig strikes are made in the south, there remains the difficult proposition of building pipelines from the wells to the export point at Port Sudao, and to the industrial area around Khartoum. And the country's lack of iofrastructure is a problem: although the barge and milroad route is only 2,000 kilometers long, consignments from Port

Sudao may take six months or more to reach the oil deposit

Construction schemes too will invigorate the economy and provide employment. A respected Middle East economic journal is calling Sudan "one of the largest civil engioccring markets in the Third World." There is a new port to be built at Suakin, south of Port Sudan, and one project-the longlei diversion canal-rivars the mammoth earthmoving work at Jubail. The Jonglei will be 280 kilometers long and 52 meters wide running between Khartoum and Jaba, the major city of the south. Cutting through the endless swamps, it will become a year round navigable waterway and reduce the three weeks it now takes to travel between the cities by steamer. 1; will also irrigate 1.5 million acres and thus boost agriculmral output by about $75 million a year.

they look at Sudan. Touted as the future "breadbasket of the Arab world," Sudan has over 200 million acres of arable land. Two out of three laborers work in agriculture, yet today only about 16 per cent of potential farmland is cultivated. The Arab countries, iocluding Saudi Arabia, have a $6.5 billion, 10-year program to expand Sudan's output, and hope someday cheap and plenciful food will be on the tables of its less fertile sister countries in the Middle East.

Yet all of Sudan's economic hopes-oil, construction, breaded by its lack of communications and transportation. Even the casual observer encounters numerous examples to show how seriously the problem affects the simplest movements of its people and grandest schemes for development, Dr. T., for instance, has been waiting for days for a confirmed reservation home: he doesn't want to make the three-week steamer trip through the jungle. but his original flight was can-Agriculture, of course, is celled when a 737 taking off

An American consultant working for the Sudanese government needs to contact his colleague at Atbara, only about 500 kilometers away, but finds it easier to telex his New York office and have it pass the message to Atbara than he does to telephone direct or tefex within the country.

The transportation situation won't be solved quickly, despite a government push to build more roads and modernize the train system. In all of Sudan, which is the largest io Africa and onethird the size of the continental U.S., there are only 515 miles of paved highways. Other roads are impassable during much of the year because of desert winds or torrential rains, A U.S. team in the country now to upgrade. the railroads says the trains are cheap and there are 4,500 miles of track, but equipment is old, slow, and in some areas come in only coce a week. Of 140 locomotives, said one engineer, only five or six were in top working condition. Most of the track is narrow gauge, which makes it unsuitable for most modern equipment. In the niocteenth century, he said, the British had dreams of o trans-African railroad and sized the Sudan system to be consistent with what they were laying down in Egypt and Cape Town. And there are other unique constraints to modernization: extensions to the west built as late as the 1950's, he added, were constructed in the presence of ma-

A very exclusive hotel

By William Tuchy EKOFISK CENTER. North Sea - It is the world's most costly hotel, serving the world's biggest city at sea. Space is booked months in 20-

The 106 rooms cost more than SI million each to build. and each has a fine ocean view, although obscured at times by fog. And it can he unsettling when 12-meter waves begin oounding the structure's stilt-like foundations.

The Ekofisk Hotel provides sleeping accommodations for 200 oil workers who help man this vast drilling and pumping complex in the middle of the North Sea. It's one of the engineering marvels of the age.

The hotel is for selected specialisis and visitors. Every night, 3,000 men bed down elsewhere in the Ekofisk network - on oil platforms, barracks snips, or supply vessels and barges.

The far-flung installations are linked by helicopter. Twice a day, 800 men are ferried from sleeping quarters to working platforms, and vice versa. Another 15 cally chopper flights link Ekofisk with Phillips Petroleum headquarters in Stavanger, Norway, 290 kms 2way. The Ekofisk complex - the name comes from a mythical Norwegian tale - is owned and operated by the Phillips Norway Group and consists of 30 netroleum operating platforms, about half of which have some kind of sleeping accommodations.

The whole apparatus is designed to exploit the largest oil field in the North Sea, which lies in Norwegian territory.

In the past 10 years, Phillips has sunk about S5 billion into the Ekofisk complex and expects to invest another billion. But the investment is already paying off: Phillips is pumping about 360,000 barrels of oil a day, with the promise of increasing production to 650,000 barrels a day

The oil is pumped directly to Teeside in England by submarine pipeline, and a billion cuhic feet (28.5 million cuhic meters) of natural gas. produced by the same wells, is fed by pipeline to Emdea, West Germany.

"We are drilling and producing at the same time." Forest Morgan, senior Phillips executive, said recently. "We've got 55 wells working and we're shooting for 150. So we've still got a lot of orilling to do."

Morgan. 54. said the Ekoiisk operation has made Phillips unmatched in the field of officulty offshore oil produc-

"There bave been offshore rigs in the Gulf of Mexico for years." he added, "but they abandon the platform when the winds get up to 60 knots. Out in the North Sea. we're still drilling in 90 knot winds. Last month, we registered one gust that hit 110 knots."

The platforms in the Ekofisk complex are designed to withstano maximum weather conditions, waves up to 75 feet and winds up to 125

The high winds and seas. the winter cold, the noise from heavy machinery and oil slick surfaces make the Ekofisk platforms a dangerous place to work. The operators, therefore, are extremely safetyconscious.

But accidents happen. The other night a contract worker fell from a drilling tower and was killed. A helicopter went oown last year, taking 13 men to their deaths. Now everyone who boards a chopper must don a survival suit.

World attention focused on Ekofisk in April 1977, when a well on the Bravo plaform blew out. The well was out of production 45 days, although no one was hurt, and there was no pollution on shore or damage to marine life.

"We've got additional safety personnel now to keep accidents to a minimum," Morgan

The drilling rights in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea were awarded to the Phillips Norway Group in 1965. Experimental drilling was a slow and laborious process, particularly in winter. But in 1970, Phillips was able to confirm what had been suspected: the Ekofisk field was the largest in Western Europe.
The difficulties in exploiting the field were enormous, since it was located 260 kms from the nearest land. Operations were subject to continuous winds and wave action. and an unprecedented amount of manpower and money were needed to build Ekofisk.

It became, in fact, the world's second most costly commercial engineering project. Only the Alaska Pipeline was more expensive.

The centerpiece of Ekofisk is a mammoth concrete tank - 82 meters high, 92 meters in diameter, and weighting 213,000 metric tons - designed as a million-barrel oil storage vessel that would permit operations to continue when foul weather shut down tanker loading.

But as more wells came in. it was decided to pump oil and gas directly 354 kms to England and 442 kms to Germany via undersea piplines, with booster stations along

The Ekofisk complex, with several facilities linked by hridges, now consists of a nerve certer and drilling, pumping, bolster and sleeping platforms. It has the capacity to move 1 million barrels of oil and 2 billion cubic feet (57 million cubic meters) of gas daily to refineries oo shore.

Momentum gathering for probe into Jonestown tragedy

GEORGETOWN. Guyana - Late in the afternoon of Nov. 20, a small, twin-engine Guyanese Air Force plane loaded with treasure lifted off from the Port Kaituma airstrip where Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif.. and four other members of his party had been killed only two days hefore.

On the plane were Ptolemy Reid, Guyana's deputy prime minister, and Viola Burnham. whose Husband, L. Forbes Burnham, has ruled this country as prime minister for almost 15 years.

Reid and Mrs. Burnbam had spent the afternoon of Nov. 20 viewing the camage that had then just heen discovered at Ionestown.

Few people in Guyana know that Reid and Mrs. Burnham personally brought more than $1 million in currency, gold and jewlery uocovered among the ruins of the People's Temple hack to government headquarters in Georgetown.

Fewer still know where the valuables are now, six weeks later, although police officials who confirmed that the cache was aboard the plane assure foreigners who ask that the fortune is still intact.

Despite assurances such as these, opponents of the Burnham government have begun to ask emharrassing questions about the relationship that existed between the Guyanese government and the People's Temple and have begun calling for an independent investigation into all aspects of the Jooestown affair.

Last week, for example, the head of the Catholic church in Guyana, Bishop Benedict Siogh, sent an open letter to President Arthur Chung, this country's ceremonial head of state, asking that such an ioties, Burnham's Peoples National Congress, and Cheddi Jagan's Peoples Progressive Party, were offered help and assisvestigation be beld.

The tragic events of Jonestown in which over 900 persons were murdered or committed suicide have raised serious questions which still remain unanswered, the hishop said. The integrity of many public figures and institutions is being questioned.

In order to restore public confidence, there is urgent need to set up an independent commission to investigate the foundation of the settlement at Jonestown and the causes that led to the final disaster, Bishop Singb said. So far, Chung has not replied.

The Burnham government has attempted to ignore questions from its domestic oppooents about the People's Temple, questions that have to do with why the groups was allowed to settle in Guyana in the first place ,the extent of access and privilege the Temple achieved in its dealings with the government and the groups involvement in local political

While there is as yet no proof that any Guyanese offi-cials were bribed by members of the People's Temple, it is known that large quantities of. cash were always available hoth at Jonestown and at the Temple's beadquarters here in Georgetown.

While there is as yet proof that Jones attempted to gain favor with local officials by encouraging his female followers to seduce top Guyanese government officials, Paula Adams, one of Jones' most trusted aides, has said publicly that she carried on an affair for several years with a prominent Guyanese diplomat.

Tigers keep out Buckeyes, 17-15

Ariri's 47-year field goal and fourth-string tailback Cliff Austin's one-yard touchdown gave Clemson a 17-9 lead, and the Tigers' defense held off an Obio State rally to give the seventhranked Tigers a 17-15 Gator Bowl victory over the Buckeyes The triumph gave the Tigers' new head coach who took over when coach Charley Pell accepted the Florida coaching job at the end of the regular season, a success in his first game. The loss was the fourth Bowl defeat in the last five years for Obio State and coach Woody Hayes.

Hayes, whose team was stopped on a potential gamelying Iwo-point conversion with 8:11 left in the game, became enraged after Clemson's middle guard. Charlie Bauman, intercepted a Ken Schlichter pass with two minutes to go inside Clemson territory.

After Bauman was run out of bounds along the Ohio State sideline, Hayes grabbed him from behind, touching off a bench emplying melee The interception spoiled a determined performance by freshman Schlichter, who completed 16 of 19 passes for 205 yards and only the one interception.

Schlichter scored on a two-yard run to cut Clemson's lead to 17-15, but tackle Jim Stuckey and back Eddie Geathers dropped him as he swept around left end on the conversion

lends high while stocks stagger

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 (AP) - While stock prices were strugging to break even, dividends on common shares logged their third straight year of strong growth in 1978.

Although the leading market indicators bounced up and down sharply in record-breaking activity for much of the year, most of them closed Friday with only modest net changes from their end-of-1977 levels.

The Dow Iones Average of 30 industrials, which posted a 3.46 loss to 805.01 for the past week, finished the year with a net decline of 26.16 points, or 3.15 per cent.

The New York Stock Exchange Composite Index, off .15 at 53.62 on the week, managed a 2 per cent gain for the

The one strong performer at the leading exchanges was the American Stock Exchange Market Value Index. After declining .29 to 150.56 for the week, the Index showed a 17.7 per cent rise for 1978 as many smaller "secondary" issues outperformed the big-name blue chips for the second straight year,

Big board volume averaged 25.13 million shares a day. for the week as the exchange completed its first .7 billionshare-plus year. Dividends paid by compaines in the Standard and Poor's 500 increased 9.9 per cent during the year, according to estimates by Standard and Poor's analysts. This continued expansion in payouts was emphasized in the waning days of the year by dividend increases approaching 20 per cent announced by such "glamor" companies as International Business Machines and Texas Instruments.

The past year's dividend growth rate was the third largest since 1950, Standard and Poor noted, ranking only behind 1977's 15.3 per cent and 1976's 10.1 per cent.

Profits of the Standard and Poor 500 companies increased by some 10.8 per cent in the past year, the firm estimated. making the courses of earnings and dividend activity virtually parallel.

Thus the payout ratio - the percentage of earnings which companies pass through to their shareholders - remained in the 42-43 per cent range, where it stood in 1977.

After a long decline from more than 60 per cent in 1970 to 40.5 per cent in 1974, the payout ratio has been slowly climbing again. Standard and Poor suggests that this has stemmed from rising pressure from holders, including many large institutions, for bigger dividends.

"Companies' more liberal attitude with regard to dividend hikes in recent years must be attributed in large part to growing awareness of shareholders' emphasis on yields as an offset to the price risks inherent in common stock ownership." Standard and Poor said. The stock market's erratic performance, high yields available on alternative investments, and continuing rapid inflation have contributed to the demand for dividend increases. The firm said that demand is likely to persist io 1979, but nevertheless envisions a slowing of the dividend growth rate because of "the uncertain condition of the economy.

"Although we are tentatively projecting an 8 to 9 per cent increase in corporate profits in the coming year, much of the gain should reflect tax-rate reductions and inventory profits stemming from inflation," the firm said.

"This, plus the high cost of borrowed money, will make companies think twice about further liberalizing payments to shareholders," it added.

Schmidt urges economic talks with China, Russia

RUNAWAY BAY, Jamaica Dec. 30 (AP)-West German Chancellor Heimut Schmidt has suggested that the Soviet Union and China be invited to meet with Western nations to discuss ways of aligning world economies.

Schmidt's statement at an informal press briefing was made Friday at the close of a two-day meeting with six other world leaders on this Caribbean island's North Coast.

"I would like to mention I will make the proposal public in the near future that the Sovict Union, other Communist Common Market (Comecom) countries and also the People's Republic of China be invited to take part in the common effort," Schmidt said.

He said he was especially interested in having Communist states participating in what he called a common fund, tied to possible international controls on commodities such as sugar, coffee and rubber. He did not elaborate and no questions were permitted.

Leonard Woodcock wants to be the U.S. ambassador to Peking but said the Senate confirmation hearings could prove a "battleground" for conservative legislators opposed to sacrificing diplomatic des with Taiwan for normalized relations with Chana.

Woodcock, who currently heads the U.S. Liaison Office in Peking, said Saturday that President Jimmy Carter has not approached him with a job offer. He said they would discuss it when he returns to Washington Jan. 25 to belp prepare for the visit of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.
"It is possible, as some bave indicated, that confirmation of whoever is named ambassador could be a battleground," Woodcock said.

Coldest Dec. 30 for 63 years

Europe chills, Moscow freezes

MOSCOW, Dec. 30 (AP)-Moscow was frozen with its coldest weather in 63 years Saturday, with temperatures plummeting to -38 degrees celsius and frost settling over many parts of the icy city. Moscow radio reported that temperatures predicted for Sunday would be the coldest on Dec. 31 in 100 years.

The Ministry of Public Health and Safety warned parents not to keep their children outside for too long because of the increasing danger of frostbite.

Even parts of Siberia do not get that cold, though a northern pocket near the town of Oymyakon, known as the "Pole of Cold" has temperatures as low as -50 to -70 degrees celsius.

The Moscow Meteorological Center reported Saturday the city's thermometers did not reach higher than -34 degrees

The lowest temperature ever recorded for Dec. 30 was in 1915, when the hermometer reached down to -38.5 degrees celsius. By contrast, 1968 cnjoyed a "heat wave" of 2.5 degrees celsius.

But two nigh-level working groups in Washington are monitoring the situation in Iran closely, one at the White House under deputy National Security Council director David Aaron and a larger inter-agency group headed by State Department Undersecretary for Political Affairs David Newsom.

U.S. concern over what it sees as Soviet interference in Iran was stepped up Friday when a U.S. official - speaking authoritatively for the government - said radio broadcasts beamed by Moscow toward Iran were aimed at undermining the stability in the country.

The flat denial that the Constellation would head toward the Gulf was seen by diplomatic sources in Washington as indicating that the United States did not want o be seen as doing anything that would upset the already-delicate situation in Iran as efforts were being made to install a new civilian government.

Reports of the task force's impending departure from the Philippines was variously interpreted by the American news media as a show of support for the Shah, part of contingency plans for a possible evacuation of Americans in Iran, and a further warning to the Soviet Union not to become involved in
